The House Through the Red Gate is the ingenious transformation of two listed stone byres into a cohesive modern home by Arte31. The formerly disconnected and isolated sections were linked together to create a barn-inspired open-plan kitchen and garden room, complete with fully glazed walls that look out towards the courtyard garden and a new gatehouse.

Inspiration was drawn from the tin-roofed pole barns that dot the Cotswold landscape, with the designers also adding personal touches like a distinctive moon gate and circular landscaping elements by Hither Garden Designs, softening the extension's linear volumes. Modern furniture and fixtures complete the Side by side with the house's historical assets are contemporary features geared towards a sustainable lifestyle, including a ground source heat pump and an outbuilding equipped with solar panels, batteries, and electric car chargers.

Beyond the physical renovation of the dwelling, the Bristol-based studio presents a new way of thinking about heritage properties — as an ode to the past and a path towards the future.
